This thesis discusses the application of Indonesia's commitment to the liberalization of commercial presence in banking and the principle of market access in accordance with the GAIS in the regulations of Bank Indonesia, the alignment settings of commercial banking presence in the regulations of Bank Indonesia with the commitment of Indonesia and the principle of market access in GATS as well as advise for improvements related to setting commercial banking presence in Indonesia. This thesis uses the method that is prescriptive nonnative research using qualitative approaches.

Based on the research, setting commercial banking presence in the regulations of Bank Indonesia is more liberal when compared with Indonesia's commitment in the GATS so that the settings are not in line with Indonesia's commitment in the GATS. Setting commercial banking presence in the regulations of Bank Indonesia has adopted the principle of market access according to the provisions of GATS so that the settings have been aligned with the principles of market access in GATS. Among other results suggest that optimization of the role and contribution of foreign banks to the economic development of Indonesia should be improved.
