Every writer through his works attempts at illustrating his view of life as well as his view of man. However, the writer's view differs from one another depending upon the social background as well as his experiences. That the work of an author is born out of his experiences, is not uncommon. The same applies to Ernest Hemingway who is considered as one of America's most famous writers and who has the ability to translate his experiences into a form of art recognized throughout the world. Hemingway is also quite possibly the most influential writer of English prose in our century for in nearly every country where his work is known, it has been imitated and assimilated, for example in radio programs.
