.....The raise of communication technology has made it easier for individuals to express things that are considered taboo especially by eastern society, including sex which normally can never be expressed explicitly through real life. One of many media serving it is online forum Krucil.net through its section called Adult Corner.

This study aims to describe the sex culture that has been hegemony in online forum users' culture through social media. Research carried out by using the method of Critical Discourse Analysis by Norman Fairclough, through a qualitative approach and virtual ethnography strategy. The study found that public discourse on sex has been expanded beyond the bonds of marriage and consumed and distributed together in public spaces. It may be said that because of the existence of social media technology, sex becomes a cultural hegemony for the community and have become part of their daily lives.
