Abstrak

This study attempts to identify a person's self-susceptibility and fear of crime against sexual abuse with the coping mechanism of women night workers at the karaoke recreation centers in the region of West Jakarta, by testing the power of each variable based on bi-variants as well as multi-variants connections. As the intervening variable the writer presents the fear of crime variable against sexual abuse. This variable is presented with the purpose to know whether the power of connection between the vulnerability variable and the coping mechanism variable among women night workers shall weaken after the intermediate variable is added.
