Abstrak

This research is focused on analyzing the determinants generating fear of crime of theft on housewives. It also gives an explanation about how these determinants generating fear of crime are related to the fear of crime itself. This quantitative explanative research uses the method of survey as its data collecting method. There are four determinants explained in this research: knowledge of crime, vulnerability to crime, community environment, and the public perception towards the criminal justice system. All of the four factors when combined together show significant regression rate (above 50 percents) on generating fear of crime.
