This Thesis discusses the aesthetic distance in the concept of disinterested. Disinterested concept by Jerome Stolnitz is the concept to understand beauty without the role of an ends, motives, and personal attachments, leading us to experience something aesthetically. Disinterested which become the tools as well as conceptual thinking is used for bringing back the concept of distance between the object of perception and the subject as spectator in the process of understanding beauty and their aesthetic experiences. This is required to evaluate aesthetic object and experience in the understanding and judging beauty and the art as the product of it.
