[ABSTRAK

Perkembangan situasi ekonomi internasional semenjak tahun 1970-an diwarnai dengan peningkatan lalu lintas modal antar negara yang telah menimbulkan perdebatan di kalangan praktisi dan akademisi. Dengan latar belakang tersebut, tulisan ini mencoba mengangkat mengenai landasan teoritis dari globalisasi keuangan yang diusung oleh dua pandangan liberal yaitu Keynesian dan neoliberal. Tulisan ini menemukan bahwa kedua pandangan tersebut memiliki posisi yang sama kuat di bidang akademis dan terdapat perdebatan yang tidak berujung mengenai berbagai aspek dari globalisasi keuangan. Tulisan ini kemudian menemukan bahwa literatur globalisasi keuangan di negara berkembang sangat fokus pada pembahasan mengenai penyebab dan konsekuensi dari fenomena tersebut.

ABSTRACT

International economics has witnessed a dramatic increase in capital flows between countries since 1970s. It has also sparked debate between practitioners and academician in explaining this phenomenon. Against this backdrop, this literature review tries to explain the theoretical foundation of the financial globalization using liberal and Keynesian perspective. This literature finds that both perspectives are well-argued and the debate reaches an inconclusivity. This literature also finds that most of the writings about globalization in developing countries focus on the cause and effect of that particular phenomenon., International economics has witnessed a dramatic increase in capital flows between countries since 1970s.
