Abstrak

This research intend to analyze sincronization between Indonesia government policy and local government policy on forestry in otonomy era. Method of this research is kualitatif, with focusing on Indonesia and local government policy. This research found that there is no policy sincronization or substainability of forestry management. It was reflected from difference policy between Indonesia and local government on bussiness license of forest product. This condition is caused by, first, implementation of decentralization on forestry between Indonesia and local government do not have consensus, secondly, local government dose not has commitment to make good forestry management policy.
