<hr>ABSTRACT

The research resulted from the reading toward the migration process and the works of modern theater of the dramatist Nandang Aradea, by which the creativity journey of the artist experienced the process of physical migration and cultural migration that affected the aesthetic transformation of his theater works. Through the migration process of Merantau (wandering about to new places), Nandang Aradea did the cultural inter-space shuttle journey, resulted from the movement among different spaces, time, and culture between urban and suburban (village), between the flow of traditional and modern culture, between locality and globalism without leaving behind his former identity, that are, the ethnicity of Sundanese culture as its root and a cosmopolitan Sundanese as way of life.

This ethnography biography research will depict dialectically the relation between the figure and his work. The creativity of an artist has the dialectic connection with the representation of his individual/self-identity through the source of his experience and knowledge that is affected by the cultural process in society. The effort of constructing the meaning of Nandang Aradea's modern theater works is done by digging the inter-space shuttle journey of his artistic process through the migration process in the four spaces: Ciamis, Bandung, Moscow, and Banten. Nandang was a dramatist who sought for knowledge about modern Indonesian theater in Bandung, then continually broadened his study in modern European theater in Moscow and assimilated the whole knowledge and theater experience in Banten by creating a form of theater methodology named Miragarasa Theater.

Each journey with different spaces, knowledge, experience, and cultural dynamic affect the transformation of Nandang's aesthetic works in the scope of artistic and thematic. The effort of constructing the meaning between Nandang Aradea's inter-space shuttle journey and his modern theater works is correlated with the four main contexts: cultural identity, the migration journey (Merantau), and aesthetic transformation that leads to Miragarasa Theater.
