

Living culture and making relationships: mothers and daughters negotiate sexuality In Indonesia and Canada (artikel buku: Social production and reproduction at the interface of public and private spheres)

Deskripsi Lengkap: <https://lib.ui.ac.id/detail?id=20426509&lokasi=lokal>

Abstrak

Purpose - To explore certain aspects of women 's experience of their reproductive lives, in different cultural contexts, especially their views on sexuality and sexual practices. It is based on transnational comparative research, and compares the experiences and meanings about motherhood and mother/daughter relationships, especially referring to sexuality and reproductive health. The two contexts we have chosen for this chapter are drawn from our data on Indonesian and Canadian women. While these women come from culturally diverse situations, we find continuities between their experiences as well as contrasts in the contexts in which they live their reproductive lives.

Methodology - Our study was based on collecting participant driven narratives focused on their experience of their reproductive lives. We interviewed women from three generations in the same families to secure