The study evaluated readers' assessment on credibility of news on certain topics accessed from newspaper, website, and app. The study was conducted by taking experiment to 37 participants. The experiment measured a number of dimensions namely completeness, relevance, well written, accuracy, impartiality, trusworthiness, and actuality. This study used randomized design One-Way ANOVA. Based on the test results $F_{\text{count}} > F_{\text{table}}$ ($3.505 > 3.28$) and $\text{Sig} (0.041) < 0.05$ then H_0 was rejected, then it argued that readers had different perspectives when they valued the credibility of news articles on Newspaper, Website and App. The study then concluded that readers found different qualities on the way each media presenting its news. Newspaper had the highest rating for credibility while websites and apps were on the second and the third. The newspaper also had the highest rating in terms of well written aspect, objectivity, trustworthiness, and accuracy. Readers who accessed news from website valued the media by its relevance, while readers thought app offered highest level on completeness, actuality, and impartiality
