With maximum return required of every initiative, companies can no longer wait until the end of a project to assess its success or failure. Multi-level learning allows organizations to breed continuous improvement while adapting on-the-fly when projects meet unexpected obstacles. "Facilitating Project Performance Improvement" helps project organizations shorten wait times, increase client satisfaction, reduce waste and improve quality within and across projects. Featuring a practical approach to incorporating structured learning into every step of any project, this groundbreaking book helps ensure both immediate improvements and long-term success.
