ABSTRAK

Skripsi ini meneliti proses legislasi dari Australia Act 1986 cth. No. 142 of 1985 yang dibahas dan disahkan pada tahun 1985 di masa pemerintahan partai buruh pimpinan Perdana Menteri Robert Hawke. Penelitian ini menjabarkan secara kualitatif proses legislasi yang terjadi di parlemen Commonwealth di tahun 1985 dengan mengacu kepada kerangka konsep republikanisme dan kerangka teori sistem Washminster di Australia. Ditemukan bahwa peranan pemerintahan partai buruh pimpinan Perdana Menteri Robert Hawke ini dapat dikategorikan dalam dua hal, yaitu peranan prosedural dan peranan substansial. Peranan prosedural ini menggambarkan sistem politik Australia yang mendukung adanya dominasi eksekutif dalam melancarkan sebuah proses legislasi. Peranan substansial ini menggambarkan situasi republikanisme yang terkait dengan tradisi aliran republikanisme yang memiliki kekhasan tersendiri di Australia.

ABSTRACT

This undergraduate thesis examines the legislation process of Australia Act 1986 cth. No. 142 of 1985 which was addressed and was ratified at 1985 under the leadership of Prime Minister Robert Hawke rsquo s Labor government. This research will qualitatively examine the legislation process that took place at the Commonwealth Parliament in 1985 by utilizing the conceptual framework of republicanism and theoretical framework of Washminster system in Australia. It is found that role of Hawke labor government can be classified onto two different categories procedural role and substantial role. For the procedural role, it describes Australian political system that encourages executive dominance in particularly of performing legislation business. For the substantial role, it narrates the Australian republican situation that forms its links with the distinctively Australian republicanism.
