Abstrak

Skripsi ini membahas tentang faktor-faktor yang mendorong dikeluarkannya kebijakan imigrasi Amerika Serikat Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals di bawah Presiden Barack Obama di tahun 2012. Kebijakan ini memiliki tujuan untuk menyelamatkan pemuda, yang masuk dan menetap di AS secara ilegal, dari deportasi selama dua tahun setelah lolos kebijakan ini. Kebijakan DACA diperkenalkan oleh pemerintahan Presiden Obama pada akhir pemerintahan periode pertamanya dan menuju pemilihan presiden AS tahun 2012. Kebijakan ini memiliki serangkaian kualifikasi yang secara umum menaruh fokus kepada batas usia, durasi menetapnya di AS, rekam jejak pendidikan, dan catatan kriminal yang baik dari para pemohon yang mengajukan untuk kebijakan DACA. Kebijakan imigrasi ini mengundang banyak kontroversi karena dianggap tidak pernah disetujui oleh Kongres AS dan bertentangan dengan hukum imigrasi AS. Menggunakan konsep National Interest dan teori Rational Choice, penulis membuktikan bahwa kebijakan imigrasi ini didorong oleh dua faktor yaitu faktor ekonomi dan faktor kalkulasi politik Presiden Obama menuju pemilihan presiden AS tahun 2012.

.....This Bachelor's thesis discusses about factors that supported the issuance of United States immigration policy Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals under President Obama in 2012. The policy was aimed to save youngsters, who were brought by their parents and have stayed in the U.S. illegally, from deportation for two years upon receiving the benefit from the policy. DACA was introduced nearing the end of President Obama's first term and towards U.S. presidential election in 2012. The policy came with a set of qualifications for applicants that mostly focused on age restrictions, duration of stay in the U.S., history of commitment towards education, and good criminal records. The policy itself spurred a lot of controversy, since it had never been approved by the Congress and is against the U.S. immigration law. Using the National Interest concept and the Rational Choice theory, the writer found that the immigration policy was driven by two factors which were the economic factor and the political calculation factor by President Obama towards U.S. presidential election in 2012.
