ABSTRACT

Vincent van Gogh, a famous painter from Zundert, Netherlands is one of the most expensive painters in the world. The flow of van Gogh 39;s painting of post-impresionism makes each of his works very memorable because of the expression of feelings poured in his paintings. One of his phenomenal paintings is entitled, Portret van Dr. Gachet 1890 . This painting is examined using qualitative research methods and assisted by the Mimesis theory of Plato and the color theory of Brewster. Photographs of the paintings were observed so that the characteristics of post-impresionism flow in Portret van Dr.Gachet 1890 can be recognized. The result of this research show that this painting is a Post-Impresionism painting. The difference between the two paintings lies in the selection of colors and abstractions within each painting. The painting is also similar with Van Gogh 39;s personal experience, which uses feelings in each of his works.
