The purpose of this study is to determine whether religiosity, need for uniqueness, self-concept, brand image, word of mouth and perceived quality are determinants of clothing interest towards sharia moslema clothing positively and significantly. Therefore, this study will examine whether clothing interest has a positive and significant impact towards purchase intention of sharia moslema clothing, and whether price consciousness has a significant and positive moderating effect between clothing interest and purchase intention of sharia moslema clothing. Data obtained using online questionnaire with total data of 324 respondents which are Islamic women who are residents of Indonesia aged at least 17 years old. Data analysis is conducted using SPSS 22 for data analysis and LISREL 8.5.1 for measurement and structural model analysis.

The results indicate that religiosity and perceived quality have a positive and significant impact towards clothing interest of sharia moslema clothing, self-concept and brand image have a negative and significant impact towards clothing interest of sharia moslema clothing and clothing interest has a positive and significant impact towards purchase intention of sharia moslema clothing. Finally, price consciousness has a positive and significant moderating effect between clothing interest and purchase intention of sharia moslema clothing.
