This study aims to empirically examine the influence of board of directors and audit committee characteristics on earnings management in Islamic banks in Asia. The characteristics of the board of directors and audit committees used in this study were Islamic organization participation of board of directors, board of directors size, independent board of directors, board of directors financial background, size of audit committee, independent audit committee and financial background of the audit committee. This study used 28 Islamic banks in Asia during 2013-2017. Data regarding the characteristics of Islamic banks are taken through the website of each Islamic bank. This study uses the Discretionary Loan Loss Provision (DLLP) as a proxy for measuring earnings management. The regression results show that among the seven characteristics of the board of directors and audit committees used in this study, only one variable is the size of the audit committee that has a significant negative effect on earnings management. While other variables do not have a significant effect on earnings management.
