This study aims to analyze the quality of the Germas program in terms of the role of input, process, output components in Soppeng and North Luwu Districts in 2019. This study uses a qualitative method with the RAP design. Data collection is done by in-depth interviews with policy makers then FGD with program implementers and the community, observing the facilities and infrastructure and document review. The informants in this study were 38 people. Analysis of the data used is thematic analysis. The results showed that the quality of the Germas program in Soppeng District was not good, while in North Luwu District most of the components were good. However, for both districts, human resources have not been adequate, the availability of facilities and infrastructure is insufficient, the availability of funds is sufficient, and there have been Circular Letters about Germas in Soppeng and North Luwu Districts. Planning and organizing in the implementation of Germas has not run optimally in Soppeng District. The implementation of Germas in the form of physical activity in gymnastics has been carried out well, but the stretching activities in the workplace have not been consistent and vegetable fruit consumption has not been maximized in the two districts. Especially for health checks it has not been routinely implemented in Soppeng District while in North Luwu Regency there is already a schedule of health checks for all SKPD. Monitoring and evaluation of the Germas program has not been effective in Soppeng or in North Luwu Districts. Soppeng District needs to hold a meeting to form a forum for coordinating the implementation of the Germas program. It is expected that the two districts will allocate human resources as needed. Disseminating Germas policy to cross programs and across sectors.
