Abstrak

Karya akhir ini disusun untuk membahas dan menganalisis bentuk state-corporate crime dalam pengimplementasian prinsip ecotourism yang justru menimbulkan environmental harm. Pesatnya perkembangan pariwisata di Indonesia, menghadirkan ecotourism sebagai strategi pembangunan pariwisata baru yang mendorong pengembangan program prioritas 10 Bali Baru, yang satu diantaranya adalah Taman Nasional Kepulauan Seribu (TNKS). Namun, pengimplementasian ecotourism yang coba dikembangkan di TNKS justru diwujudkan dalam tiga target materiil 10 Bali Baru, diantaranya target pemasukan devisa, target jumlah wisatawan, dan target penyelesaian waktu pembangunan. Pada akhirnya, pengimplementasian ecotourism di TNKS berakhir pada dampak environmental harm.

.....This paper is structured to discuss and analyze the forms of state-corporate crime in the implementation of the principle of ecotourism which actually causes environmental harm. The rapid development of tourism in Indonesia, presenting ecotourism as a new tourism development strategy that encourages the development of the Thousand Islands National Park (TNKS) as one of the 10 priority programs in Bali Baru. However, the implementation of ecotourism that was tried to be developed in TNKS was actually realized in three material targets for 10 New Bali, including foreign exchange income targets, the target number of tourists, and the target of completion of development time. In the end, the implementation of ecotourism in TNKS ended on the impact of environmental harm.
