

gaps related to this topic. In addition, this paper also traces the literature trend, distribution of authors' origin, as well as the paradigmatic trend. Based on these conditions, this paper was successfully revealed the fact that FPA is not a mainstream perspective in studying EU's foreign policy. Even so, this paper didn't identify scholar that rejects the idea of EU's foreign policy. This paper will conclude with some recommendations for further research including paradigmatic diversification, especially FPA and a critical approach, as well as topics that rarely discussed but are quite relevant to the empirical conditions of EU's foreign policy.

Keywords: Foreign Policy Analysis, European Union, European Foreign Policy, EU Foreign Policy, EU External Relations, EPC, CFSP