Abstrak

Perilaku konsumen secara konseptual dimulai dengan marketing stimuli yang kemudian berakhir dengan keputusan pembelian. Penelitian ini mencoba menganalisa pengaruh e-service quality, reputation, web design, dan price, terhadap trust, customer satisfaction, dan customer loyalty. Pada saat terjadinya fenomena pandemi Covid-19, pembeli terikat untuk dengan cepat beralih ke platform e-commerce untuk memenuhi kebutuhan sehari-hari, menyebabkan pergeseran perilaku konsumen. Survei terhadap 370 responden didapatkan melalui kuesioner online, dengan menggunakan metode kuantitatif dan data dianalisis menggunakan Structural Equation Modelling (SEM). Hasil penelitian ini menunjukkan bahwa e-service quality, trust, dan price berpengaruh terhadap customer satisfaction. Apabila e-commerce dapat merespons keluhan pelanggan serta memberikan pelayanan yang disesuaikan secara personal untuk memenuhi kebutuhan pelanggan, maka pelanggan kemungkinan akan merasa puas dengan layanan yang diberikan.

Consumer behavior conceptually starts with marketing stimuli that then ends with purchasing decisions. This study attempts to analyze the effect of e-service quality, reputation, web design, and price on trust, customer satisfaction, and customer loyalty. At the beginning of Covid-19 pandemic, consumers were compelled to quickly switch to e-commerce platforms to fulfill their daily needs, leading to a shift in consumer behavior. A survey of 370 respondents was collected through an online questionnaire, using quantitative methods and data were analyzed using Structural Equation Modeling (SEM). The results of this study indicate that e-service quality, trust, and price have an influence on customer satisfaction. When e-commerce can respond to customer complaints and provide personalised services to meet customer needs, the customer is likely to be satisfied with the service provided.
