.....Loneliness commonly occurs in young adults, a period marked by change and instability. Despite its prevalence, loneliness adversely impacts individuals' lives and requires intervention. Mindfulness practices, such as interpersonal mindfulness, are suggested to address loneliness within social relationships. Loneliness was assessed using the UCLA Loneliness Scale Revised Version 3, while interpersonal mindfulness was measured using the Interpersonal Mindfulness Scale. The research findings indicate no significant relationship between interpersonal mindfulness and loneliness. These findings suggest that interpersonal mindfulness does not directly correlate with loneliness levels in young adults.
