This internship report discusses the evaluation of investment monitoring procedures conducted by the PEP Agency towards PT SHO and analyzes the author's self-reflection results during the internship at the PEP Agency. The evaluation is carried out by comparing the conformity of investment monitoring procedures from inputs, tools and techniques, to outputs using the Monitor and Control Project Work theory in Project Integration Management. Based on the evaluation results, there are several monitoring procedures in the field that have been implemented and are either consistent or inconsistent with the characteristics but can still operate effectively.
