Interiorscapes are gardens within a building, either covered or open to the air and many of today's best designers see these planted interiors as the most congenial type of environment for working and living. That's why they're becoming increasingly popular both in cities where space is at a premium and in countries with extreme climates. Featuring recent innovative work by many of today's most exciting landscape designers including Martha Schwartz, Tadao Ando, and Georg Penker this lush volume is packed with inspirational and practical ideas. An array of stunning images from around the world showcases breathtaking inner sanctuaries, living architecture, off-the-wall or hanging and mid-air gardens, and gardens under glass.
