.....This study aims to analyze the impact of travel vloggers on viewers' attitudes and intentions toward social commerce in the context of tourism and social commerce in Indonesia. Using a quantitative method, this research examines the influence of advertising content value within travel vlogger content on viewers' attitudes toward the video and the promoted destination. Furthermore, this study analyzes how influencer credibility factors from travel vloggers impact viewers' attitudes toward the tourism destinations featured in the videos. Finally, the study evaluates the effect of viewers' attitudes toward the video and destination on their social commerce intentions. Data was collected through an online survey involving 147 social media users who followed travel vlogger content in the past two months. The results show that advertising content value, such as informative value in travel vlogger videos, positively influences viewers' attitudes toward both the video and the destination featured. Entertainment value positively affects viewers' attitudes toward the travel vlogger video content, but not toward the promoted destination. Additionally, influencer credibility, such as expertise and trustworthiness, influences viewers' attitudes toward both the video and the promoted destination. Attractiveness impacts viewers' attitudes toward the video, while similarity between the travel vlogger and the audience influences viewers' attitudes toward the promoted destination. Viewers' attitudes toward the video and the destination positively influence their social commerce intentions. These findings provide valuable insights for marketing practitioners, particularly in the tourism industry, on leveraging the power of travel vloggers as an effective marketing tool, and emphasize the importance of considering the emotional connection created between the travel vlogger and the audience in promoting tourism destinations.
