Abstrak

This paper presents a comprehensive financial statement analysis of oOh!media Limited, a leading Out of Home (OOH) advertising company in Australia and New Zealand. The study examines the company's financial performance, profitability, and valuation through various accounting principles and financial models. The analysis covers income statement presentation, clean surplus relations, and property, plant, and equipment (PPE) articulation, highlighting key financial metrics and trends. Additionally, a residual income model valuation is conducted, demonstrating the company's equity position and financial health. The report also includes a reformulation of financial statements to distinguish between operating and financing activities, allowing for a clearer assessment of financial leverage and efficiency. Ratio analysis, including revenue growth and profit margin interpretation, provides insights into OML's financial stability and operational effectiveness. The study further incorporates a DuPont analysis to evaluate return on capital and financial leverage, along with forecasting and valuation techniques to assess investment viability. Sensitivity analysis and multiple interpretations suggest the potential market outlook for OML's shares. Overall, this research offers a detailed financial assessment of oOh!media Limited, providing valuable insights for investors, analysts, and stakeholders.
