ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I must thank various people for help with the completion of this thesis. I would apologize for those whose names might not appear here but have provided important contributions to the completion of this thesis. The highest tribute and a special word of thanks go to the persons as follows:

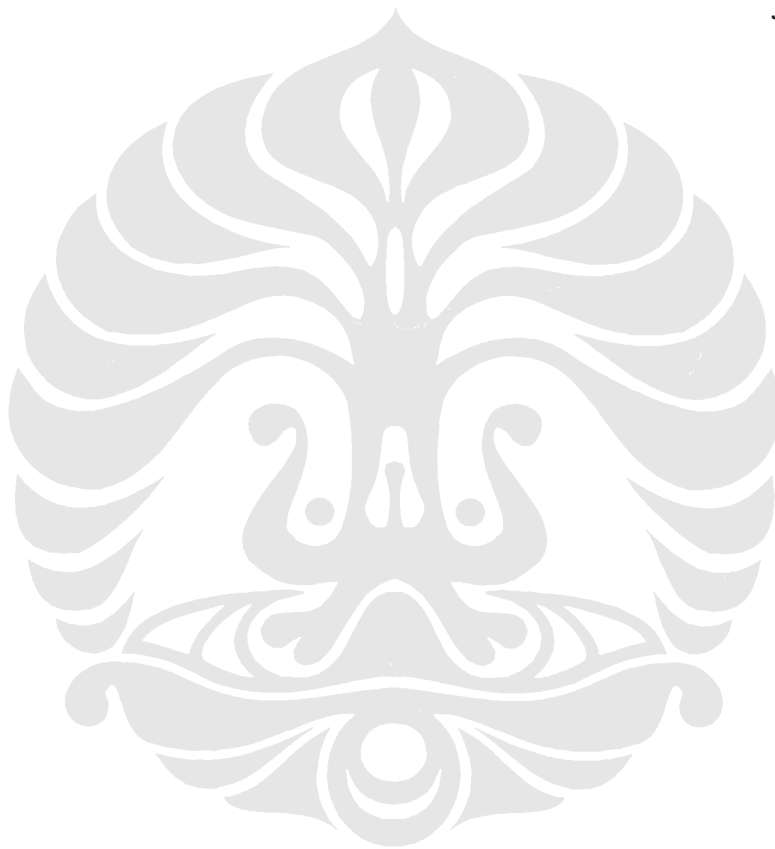

1. The late professor Parsudi Suparlan, who was the most exceptional person in my life and made me tough and confident in conducting the research of this thesis and I believe his precious thoughts will continue existing in academic life.
2. Bapak Rony M Bishry, PhD, the mentor who has been so helpful in providing inputs so that I can complete the manuscript of this thesis in time.
3. Ibu Retno S Mamoto, PhD, the reader of the manuscript of this thesis, who made some astute comments and offered excellent suggestions while I was completing the manuscript.
4. Dr Nana Nurliana, MA, to whom I must convey my deepest gratitude. I do admire Dr Nurliana, who by the way turned me from someone who used to look down on history to become one of those who pay the highest attention to the importance of history in academic life. Her admirable ways of teaching American History made me fully aware that history is very important and not something boring—instead of being very interesting—to learn.
5. Professor Dr Soenarjati Djajaneegara, who also made me so conscious that learning Literature indeed is very interesting. Her simple but astounding ways of teaching Literature on American Studies made me more and more interested in studying and reading American Literature.
6. All the lecturers of the American Studies under the Pascasarjana Program of Universitas Indonesia, who gave invaluable contributions to me and other students during the classes.
7. All the personnel of the Secretariat of the American Studies under the Pascasarjana Program of Universitas Indonesia (KWA UI) in Jakarta.
8. My beloved wife Uli Sitorus and children i.e. Alfaline d'Angelique, Brigitta d'Avriella, Cliff Moranco de Fevrier and Develyne de Meichella.

9. All the classmates of the American Studies under the Pascasarjana Program of Universitas Indonesia.

I hope this thesis titled “Libertarian and Conservative Arguments on Property Takings: Eminent Domain and Abortion Ban” can be useful for those who may do researches on similar topic or others who want to study more about America.
