Love is one of essential things that belong to human, but not every human can understand the significance of love itself nonetheless. In point of fact, if love is capable of being understood wholeheartedly, then all human will definitely be able to get hold of their own existences along with the power to satisfy their quality of life, one of which is an absolute humanity since love is the greatest key to reach the humanity itself. The concept of profound love becomes hard to reach since the significance of love has been generalized and limited that humans cannot explore the love they possess which causes their hopes in life turn out to be difficult to achieve. Therefore, Gabriel Marcel, an existentialist philosopher, brings back the concept of profound love which livens up humans not just as having but being, and he breaks the entire concept of love whose significance has been narrowed. Then all of this comes along with John Lennons idea which redefines the concept of love all the way through both his artworks and thoughts that have been summarized in All You Need is Love song. This thesis will reopen the concept of love and reformulate the significance of love through the thoughts of Gabriel Marcel and John Lennon which make us able to see love as a mystery not a problem that has to be solved. Finally, right through All You Need is Love song, we are able to understand love as the essential role of life.
