Abstrak

Penelitian ini ingin melihat pengaruh corporate governance dan country governance terhadap performa perbankan dengan proksi ROE dan ROA pada pra dan pasca krisis finansial global 2008. Observasi dilakukan terhadap 65 bank di Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore, Thailand, Philippines, and Vietnam selama kurun 3 tahun pra (2005-2007) dan pasca (2009-2011) krisis finansial global 2008. Data yang digunakan ialah data panel yang bersumber dari data perbankan dan World Bank. Dengan menggunakan Generalized Least Square, didapatkan hasil bahwa corporate governance dan country governance berpengaruh signifikan terhadap performa perbankan, walaupun memiliki perbedaan arah pada pra dan pasca krisis finansial global 2008

This research examines the impact of corporate governance and country governance on bank performance (as measured by ROE and ROA), before and after 2008 global financial crisis. Observed samples are 65 banks in Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore, Thailand, Philippines, and Vietnam within period of before (2005-2007) and after (2009-2011) 2008 global financial crisis. Data sources are from bank's report and World Bank. By using panel data of firm and country data and by using Generalized Least Square estimation model, research finds that country governance and country governance significantly affect bank performance, although some variables of both have different sign before and after 2008 global financial crisis.
