By ratifying the covenants of economic, social, and cultural rights as mentioned in the laws number 11 of 2005, rights of every citizen is legally fulfilled. This covenant stipulates and arranges the acknowledgement of citizen's rights in economic, social, and cultural field so that the covenants will strengthen the structure of Indonesia's positive laws in human rights, including rights on education. The national legal stipulation should be related to the international legal stipulation in order to minimize or to overcome the problems in fulfilling the children's rights of education in Indonesia. Certainly, such ratification will oblige the government to submit the report on the execution of the covenants to UN (Human Rights Commission). This obligation will demand the government to issue in the covenants. Therefore, there will be no government policy (central and provincial level) which is not relevant to the stipulations of the covenants in fulfilling the children's rights on education.
